

Michigan Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Network (MUUSJN)

BUC participates in a statewide network of UU congregations and fellowships working together on social justice matters. This network is known as the Michigan Unitarian Universalist Social Justice Network, or MUUSJN (pronounced “moose gin”).

Mission: To foster the worth and dignity of people by promoting social justice.

Vision: Michigan faith communities connected and empowered to create a more just and caring world.

Ways to Participate

- Visit www.uujustice.org to learn about MUUSJN’s work, including current programs. Speak with a BUC representative about how to get involved in a topic of interest (contacts below).
- On the website, click “Action Alerts,” then complete the form to receive action alerts and other timely news via email. The frequency is generally 2-3 per month. Alerts give specific instructions on what to do; e.g., call an elected representative, participate in public events, attend a hearing in Lansing, and other actions.
- On the website, click “Become a member” to provide financial support.

Funding

MUUSJN is funded through congregational plate donations, annual memberships, and grants.

Representation

Three members of BUC and two from neighboring congregations represent Region V (Southeast Michigan) on the MUUSJN board. They are committed to helping facilitate a useful partnership for Region V congregations in this statewide coalition.
